A HOLIDAY STORY: THE Gift Of Memories

An unopened gift sat in Dad's old rocking chair. There was no tag on it, and the mysterious package had everyone in the family guessing as we gathered together for Christmas dinner.

I admit, I had been apprehensive about the holiday season this year because it was our first since Dad passed away. You see, he just loved this time of year. His joy and enthusiasm made the holidays for this family, and it was hard to imagine that they were here, and he wasn't.

Although the mystery of the gift seemed to bring our family closer together, I wondered how not having Dad here would affect us ... especially my Mother. She reminisced about their second Christmas together. They had just learned she was expecting their first child. How special that Christmas was! Everyone loved hearing Mom tell the story.

Like many times before, our family enjoyed a wonderful dinner, but this year we also shared memories of holidays past, especially those with Dad. Soon, it was time to exchange our gifts. As the younger grandchildren eagerly tore into the brightly wrapped packages, it took me back to when I was a child. Dad had always made Christmas special for us, and he always seemed to know how to pick just the right gift.

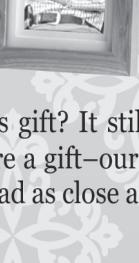

Finally, the only unopened package that remained was the one on Dad's chair. We weren't sure who should open it, but after some discussion, we agreed that it should be my oldest son, since he had always been very close to his Grandfather. He said it was an honor to be chosen, and there were smiles and tears all around when we saw the gift was a handsome, framed portrait of Dad—just the way we all remembered him.

Who in our family had been thoughtful enough to give us this gift? It still remains a mystery, but it made me realize that all memories are a gift—ours to cherish for the rest of our lives. Having them helps us keep Dad as close as our hearts. ■
